EVIESAYS TO POWER ONLINE EVENT CALENDARS FOR GATEHOUSE MEDIA, INC.

NASHVILLE – GateHouse Media, Inc. is partnering with eviesays, a search engine for event and entertainment listings, to power its online event and entertainment calendars, it was announced today.

The agreement means the Rochester-based GateHouse Media, Inc. will adopt the eviesays calendar technology at its more than 400 weekly and daily newspaper websites. As part of that agreement, visitors to GateHouse websites will be able to find, browse, and interact with the hundreds of thousands of event listings nationwide residing at the eviesays.com website.

The calendars, which will be privately branded to have the look and feel of GateHouse websites, will be “powered by eviesays.com.” Visitors to the individual sites will be able to submit their listings via an on-line submissions form to the paper. Use of the technology also means the GateHouse Media, Inc. papers have the ability to export the listings directly from their databases into their print editions (so-called “web-to-print” technology).

The eviesays platform will enable users to export their favorite listings to their personal calendar software (Outlook, Palm, iCal, etc.), e-mail listings to friends, and get directions to events. The calendar allows GateHouse Media to sell advertising within the application.

“GateHouse recognizes that rich calendars provide a wealth of information for readers and viewers,” said Bruce Dobie, President and CEO of Dobie Media Inc., parent company of eviesays. “If you’re looking for where to go, and what to do, eviesays is the perfect solution for local audiences.”
